25 _____
26 STRAUB, Circuit Judge:

27 Plaintiff-Appellant Felipe Oteze Fowlkes (“Fowlkes”) appeals from a March 31, 2003, 28 judgment of the United States District Court for the Northern District of New York (Thomas J.
29 McAvoy, Judge) dismissing his civil rights action, which alleges improper suspension of his 30 social security benefits, and declining to treat the action as a petition for review of a decision of 31 the Social Security Administration (“SSA” or the “Commissioner”). For the reasons stated

1 below, we remand this action to the District Court with instructions to treat Fowlkes’s complaint
2 as a petition for review of the Commissioner’s suspension of Fowlkes’s benefits and to remand 3 to the Commissioner to examine whether Fowlkes’s benefits were suspended as of the date of a 4 warrant or order issued by a court or other authorized tribunal on the basis of a finding that 5 Fowlkes fled or was fleeing from justice, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) (2000) and 20
6 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1).

7 FACTS AND PROCEDURAL BACKGROUND

8 In 1997, Fowlkes applied for and was granted Supplemental Security Income (“SSI”)
9 benefits after an Administrative Law Judge (“ALJ”) determined that he was disabled based on a 10 mental illness. On September 7, 1999, Fowlkes was indicted by a grand jury in Nottaway County 11 Circuit Court in Virginia for felony larceny, and on November 2, 1999, Fowlkes was indicted in 12 the same court for making a false material statement on a voter registration form.

13 On March 16, 2000, the SSA informed Fowlkes – who was then residing in Schenectady, 14 New York – that he had been determined to be a fugitive felon ineligible for SSI benefits on the 15 basis of the Virginia indictments. The notice stated that Fowlkes’s benefits were being 16 suspended retroactively to September 1999, although Fowlkes had already been paid for months 17 between September 1999 and March 2000.³ The SSA considered the benefits to be an 18 overpayment.

19 Fowlkes requested a hearing to challenge the suspension of his benefits, and testified

³The parties agree on these facts, as well as the fact that Fowlkes was also paid for April 2000, and that Fowlkes was not entitled to benefits as of May 2000 because of his incarceration in Rensselaer County, NY on April 23, 2000, for attempted robbery.

1 before an ALJ on November 29, 2000. In ruling after the hearing, the ALJ noted that the issue
2 under consideration was whether Fowlkes “continue[d] to be ineligible for [SSI] benefits” 3 pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) “because of an outstanding warrant for arrest on felony 4 charges.” The ALJ concluded that because the Nottoway County Sheriff verified that two felony
5 charges were pending against Fowlkes, he was a fugitive felon. On April 10, 2001, Fowlkes filed 6 a request for review by the SSA Appeals Council, which denied his request.

7 On April 1, 2002, Fowlkes filed the instant action pro se in the United States District
8 Court for the Northern District of New York. The complaint named as defendants John Adamec
9 and Paul Thomas – two officials from the Schenectady, NY SSA District Office – and the ALJ
10 who had affirmed the SSA’s decision, Joseph F. Gibbons, claimed that his right to due process 11 had been violated, and requested an injunctive order reinstating Fowlkes’s benefits and granting 12 him compensatory and punitive damages.

13 Fowlkes argued in his complaint that the defendants wrongly determined that he was a 14 “fleeing felon” under 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) because, although Fowlkes was informed by the 15 Nottoway County Sheriff’s Department that he would be arrested if found in Virginia, the 16 sheriff’s department declined to issue an extradition warrant outside Virginia. Fowlkes argued 17 that without an order of return to Virginia, he was not a fugitive from justice and thus could not 18 be deemed a fleeing felon.

19 The district court sua sponte dismissed the case against ALJ Gibbons under the doctrine 20 of quasi-judicial immunity, and referred the motion to dismiss to Magistrate Judge David R.
21 Homer. The magistrate judge issued a Report and Recommendation on March 5, 2003, in which 22 he recommended that Fowlkes’s civil rights claims be dismissed, but that the action be converted

1 into an appeal of an adverse decision of the SSA pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 405(g), with 2 Commissioner Joanne B. Barnhart substituted as defendant. The magistrate judge held that a 3 person is “fleeing” under 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) and 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339 when ““he hides
4 or absents himself with the intent to frustrate prosecution.”” Fowlkes v. Adamec, No. 02-CV-468, 5 Report-Recommendation and Order, Slip. Op., at 10 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 5, 2003) (quoting United 6 States v. Rivera-Ventura, 72 F.3d 277, 280 (2d Cir. 1995)). The magistrate judge found that 7 there was no evidence that Fowlkes knew of the charges prior to March 16, 2000, nor that he had 8 fled the jurisdiction in an attempt to avoid prosecution. Therefore, the magistrate judge held that 9 no evidence supported the ALJ’s finding that Fowlkes was a fleeing felon prior to March 16, 10 2000. The magistrate judge further held that there existed some evidence that Fowlkes was a 11 fleeing felon after March 16, 2000. Accordingly, the magistrate judge recommended that the 12 decision of the Commissioner be reversed as to the effective date of the suspension and 13 remanded for a recalculation of benefits, if any, to which Fowlkes was entitled for the period 14 from September 1999 to March 2000.

15 In March 2003, Fowlkes filed pro se objections to the magistrate judge’s report and 16 recommendation. Fowlkes objected to the magistrate judge’s conclusion that evidence existed 17 that he was a fugitive felon as of March 16, 2000. He asserted that he did not actually receive 18 notice of the basis for the suspension from the SSA until he voluntarily went to the Schenectady 19 Police Department on April 1, 2000. Fowlkes also asserted that the SSA did not have the 20 authority to deem him a fugitive felon absent a finding of such status in an extradition 21 proceeding. Finally, Fowlkes stated that he had already received SSI benefits for the period 22 between September 1999 and March 2000, and therefore did not wish for a remand to

1 “recalculate” benefits, but appears to have been seeking a finding that he had never been a fleeing 2 felon and thus that his benefits should be “restored” completely.

3 On March 31, 2003, the District Court adopted the recommendation of the magistrate 4 judge only inasmuch as it recommended the dismissal of Fowlkes’s civil rights claim.

5 Addressing Fowlkes’s claim as a Fifth Amendment due process claim pursuant to Bivens v. Six 6 Unknown Fed. Narcotics Agents, 403 U.S. 388 (1971), the District Court noted that “courts 7 should decline to create a remedy for constitutional violations where there is an ‘explicit 8 congressional declaration’ that injured parties should be ‘remitted to another remedy, equally 9 effective in the view of Congress.’” Fowlkes v. Adamec, No. 02-CV-468, Decision & Order, Slip 10 Op., at 3-4 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2003) (quoting Bivens, 403 U.S. at 397). The District Court then 11 noted that 42 U.S.C. § 405(g) provided for judicial review of disability benefit determinations.
12 The District Court also held that even assuming Fowlkes’s claim was actionable under Bivens, 13 Fowlkes had failed to state a due process claim, as he was afforded an ALJ hearing that satisfied 14 the “fundamental requirement of due process” that he have “notice and the opportunity to be 15 heard at a meaningful time in a meaningful manner.” Id. at 4 (internal quotation marks omitted).

16 The District Court also stated that “the magistrate judge’s recommendation to convert the 17 action and remand it back to the Commissioner for further determination” was the “only avenue 18 available” to Fowlkes. Id. at 5. The District Court however, declined to adopt this 19 recommendation because it found that Fowlkes “clearly does not want that relief.” Id. The 20 District Court therefore did not convert Fowlkes’s action to a petition for review. Judgment was 21 entered on March 31, 2003.

22 Fowlkes filed a timely notice of appeal on April 16, 2003. On January 15, 2004, this

1 Court sua sponte appointed counsel to represent Fowlkes for this appeal, and directed the parties
2 to brief (1) whether, under 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A), Fowlkes was “fleeing to avoid 3 prosecution, or custody or confinement after conviction”; (2) what standard of review applies and 4 what standard of deference, if any, is appropriate to applicable regulations or other interpretive 5 authority of the SSA; and (3) what relief, if any, Fowlkes is entitled to if we determine that he 6 was not statutorily ineligible for SSI benefits. See Fowlkes v. Adamec, No. 03-6095, 2004 WL
7 75376 (2d Cir. Jan. 15, 2004).

8 In his counseled brief, Fowlkes argues that he was not a fugitive felon ineligible for SSI
9 benefits under 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) as of September 1999 because (1) the statute requires 10 he have an intention to flee, which Fowlkes argues that he lacked prior to March 2000 because he 11 was not aware of the indictments against him in Virginia, and after March 2000 because an intent 12 to flee cannot be inferred where a petitioner was financially unable to return to the charging state; 13 and (2) the regulations require a court order finding that Fowlkes was a fleeing felon before the 14 SSA can suspend benefits, and no such court order existed here. The Commissioner responds 15 that 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) does not require a showing of intent, that the regulations do not 16 require a court order, and that these interpretations are entitled to deference under Chevron, 17 U.S.A., Inc. v. Natural Resources Defense Council, Inc., 467 U.S. 837, 842-43 (1984). On April 18 22, 2005, Fowlkes submitted a pro se supplemental brief reiterating his appeal of the District 19 Court’s dismissal of his § 1983 claim.

20 Two amicus briefs have been submitted on behalf of Fowlkes, one by the American 21 Association of Retired Persons (“AARP”), and another by the Greater Upstate Law Project
22 (“GULP”), Legal Services for New York City, the Mental Health Project of the Urban Justice

1 Center, the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill of New York City, Connecticut Legal Services,
2 Greater Hartford Legal Aid, New Haven Legal Assistance Association, and the South Royalton
3 Legal Clinic at Vermont Law School.

4 DISCUSSION

5 I. Civil Rights Claim

6 This Court reviews de novo the District Court’s grant of the defendants’ motion to 7 dismiss Fowlkes’s civil rights claim for failure to state a claim pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P.
8 12(b)(6). See Hernandez v. Coughlin, 18 F.3d 133, 136 (2d Cir. 1994). We must accept the facts 9 alleged in the complaint as true and construe all reasonable inferences in Fowlkes’s favor. Id.
10 The complaint may be dismissed where “it appears beyond doubt that the plaintiff can prove no 11 set of facts in support of his claim which would entitle him to relief.” Id. (quoting Allen v.
12 Westpoint-Pepperell, Inc., 945 F.2d 40, 44 (2d Cir. 1991) (internal quotation marks omitted)).

13 Fowlkes argued below, and argues on appeal, that the SSA violated his Fifth Amendment 14 right to due process in suspending his SSI benefits. “[T]o present a due process claim, a plaintiff 15 must establish (1) that he possessed a liberty interest and (2) that the defendant(s) deprived him 16 of that interest as a result of insufficient process.” Giano v. Selsky, 238 F.3d 223, 225 (2d Cir.
17 2001) (internal quotation marks omitted). Fowlkes’s claim satisfies the first of these 18 requirements in that an individual’s interest in continued receipt of social security benefits has 19 been recognized as a statutorily created property interest protected by the Fifth Amendment. See 20 Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 332 (1976). Fowlkes has not, however, been deprived of 21 this interest as a result of insufficient process. Fowlkes admits to having notice of the suspension

1 and to participating in an ALJ hearing during which he had the opportunity to introduce evidence 2 establishing his continued eligibility for SSI benefits. As the District Court correctly noted, the 3 “plaintiff was afforded all the process he was due. His complaint is simply that he disagrees with 4 the administrative interpretation and application of the ‘fleeing felon’ rule.” Fowlkes v. Adamec, 5 No. 02-CV-468, Decision & Order, Slip. Op., at 4 (N.D.N.Y. Mar. 31, 2003). As such, the 6 District Court did not err in dismissing Fowlkes’s civil rights claim.

7 Furthermore, as Fowlkes’s arguments focus on the sufficiency of the evidence and the 8 legal standards used in determining that he was a fugitive felon ineligible for benefits, we agree 9 with the magistrate judge that his complaint is more properly construed as a request for judicial 10 review of a decision of the Commissioner under 42 U.S.C. § 405(g).

11 II. Review of SSA Commissioner’s Decision

12 When reviewing the Commissioner’s decision denying benefits, we “review the 13 administrative record de novo to determine whether there is substantial evidence supporting the 14 Commissioner’s decision and whether the Commissioner applied the correct legal standard.” 15 Machadio v. Apfel, 276 F.3d 103, 108 (2d Cir. 2002). Fowlkes argues that his benefits were 16 improperly suspended because the plain language of 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) requires a finding 17 of intent. He also argues that SSA regulations provide that the effective date of the suspension of 18 benefits is the date on which a warrant or order is issued on the basis of a finding that an 19 individual has fled or is fleeing from justice and that there existed no warrant or court order 20 finding that Fowlkes had fled or was fleeing from justice.

21 Under 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A), an individual is ineligible to receive SSI benefits 22 during any month in which he is “fleeing to avoid prosecution, or custody or confinement after

1 conviction, under the laws of the place from which the person flees, for a crime, or an attempt to 2 commit a crime, which is a felony under the laws of the place from which the person flees.” 42
3 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A)(i). The statute’s implementing regulation, 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1), 4 provides that the suspension of an individual’s benefits is effective on the first day of the earlier 5 of:

6 (i) The month in which a warrant or order for the individual’s arrest or apprehension, an 7 order requiring the individual’s appearance before a court or other appropriate tribunal 8 (e.g., a parole board), or similar order is issued by a court or other duly authorized 9 tribunal on the basis of an appropriate finding that the individual--

10 (A) Is fleeing, or has fled, to avoid prosecution as described in paragraph (a)(1) of 11 this section;

12 (B) Is fleeing, or has fled, to avoid custody or confinement after conviction as 13 described in paragraph (a)(2) of this section;

14 (C) Is violating, or has violated, a condition of his or her probation or parole as 15 described in paragraph (a)(3) of this section; or 16 (ii) The first month during which the individual fled to avoid such prosecution, fled to 17 avoid such custody or confinement after conviction, or violated a condition of his or her 18 probation or parole, if indicated in such warrant or order, or in a decision by a court or 19 other appropriate tribunal.

20 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1).

21 The Commissioner contends that the statute does not require proof of a felon’s intent to 22 flee and that the only court order required by the regulation is a warrant for an individual’s 23 arrest, not a warrant indicating that an individual has fled from justice. The Commissioner 24 argues that this interpretation of the regulation is contained in the Social Security Program 25 Operations Manual Systems (“POMS”). The POMS state that an individual is ineligible to 26 receive SSI benefits beginning any month “in which a warrant, a court order or decision, or an 27 order or decision by an appropriate agency . . . is issued which finds that the individual is wanted 28 in connection with a crime that is a felony,” and that “[t]he warrant does not have to state that the 29 individual is ‘fleeing’ for the suspension to apply.” POMS SI 00530.010 (emphasis added).

1 Another written employee instruction, EM-98075, states that a warrant “need only specify that an 2 individual is wanted in connection with a felony charge” for that individual to be determined to 3 be a fleeing felon. Instruction EM-98075.

4 Even assuming that the employee manuals/instructions should be afforded deference 5 generally, see Bubnis v. Apfel, 150 F.3d 177, 181 (2d Cir. 1998), we need not afford any 6 deference to the manuals here, because the plain language of the statute and its implementing 7 regulation do not permit the construction contained within the manuals.

8 The statute does not permit the Commissioner to conclude simply from the fact that there 9 is an outstanding warrant for a person’s arrest that he is “fleeing to avoid prosecution.” 42
10 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A). “Fleeing” in § 1382(e)(4)(A) is understood to mean the conscious 11 evasion of arrest or prosecution. See Black’s Law Dictionary 670 (8th ed. 2004) (defining 12 “flight” as “[t]he act or an instance of fleeing, esp. to evade arrest or prosecution”). Thus, there 13 must be some evidence that the person knows his apprehension is sought. The statute’s use of 14 the words “to avoid prosecution” confirms that for “flight” to result in a suspension of benefits, it 15 must be undertaken with a specific intent, i.e., to avoid prosecution.

16 This construction of the statute finds support in our interpretation of the phrase “fleeing 17 from justice” in 18 U.S.C. § 3290 (“No statute of limitations shall extend to any person fleeing 18 from justice.”). In Jhirad v. Ferrandina, 486 F.2d 442, 444 (2d Cir. 1973), we construed these 19 words to imply an intent requirement. We held that “on the basis of the plain language and the 20 purpose of Section 3290 . . . the government must show an intent to flee from prosecution or 21 arrest before the statute of limitations is tolled.” Id. We noted that the “common sense 22 connotation” of the term “fleeing from justice” makes the phrase applicable “only [to] those

1 persons . . . who have absented themselves from the jurisdiction of the crime with the intent of 2 escaping prosecution.” Id. Indeed, we held, “[i]t does not appear to us to be unreasonable to 3 provide for tolling of the statute of limitations when a person leaves the place of his alleged 4 offense to avoid prosecution or arrest and for not tolling the statute when a person without such 5 purpose of escaping punishment merely moves openly to another place of residence.” Id. at 444-6 45; see also United States v. Rivera-Ventura, 72 F.3d 277, 280 (2d Cir. 1995) (noting that 7 “fleeing from justice” is a term that “has generally been interpreted to mean a flight with intent to 8 avoid or frustrate prosecution”).

9 The implementing regulation, 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1), is consistent with a 10 construction of the statute that includes a requirement of intentional “flight,” and, indeed, may be 11 stricter than the statute, insofar as it provides that the effective date of a benefits suspension is the 12 date of issuance of a warrant or order issued by a court or other authorized tribunal on the basis 13 of a finding that an individual fled or was fleeing from justice. Thus, the regulation does not 14 permit the agency to make a finding of flight; rather, it demands a court or other appropriate 15 tribunal to have issued a warrant or order based on a finding of flight. The passages from the 16 POMS and EM cited by the Commissioner state a directly contradictory position from the 17 regulation. They contemplate suspension of benefits without any finding of “flight” by a court or 18 other tribunal.

19 An agency’s interpretation of its own statute and regulation “must be given ‘controlling 20 weight unless it is plainly erroneous or inconsistent with the regulation.’” Thomas Jefferson 21 Univ. v. Shalala, 512 U.S. 504, 512 (1994) (quoting Udall v. Tallman, 380 U.S. 1, 16 (1965) 22 (internal quotation marks omitted)). The Commissioner’s current interpretation is not a

1 permissible construction of either the statute or the regulation because it contemplates suspension
2 of benefits without any finding of “flight” by the agency, a court, or other tribunal. Therefore, it
3 is not entitled to deference. Based on a plain reading of the statute and regulations, we conclude 4 that benefits may be suspended only as of the date of a warrant or order issued by a court or other 5 authorized tribunal on the basis of a finding that an individual has fled or was fleeing from 6 justice.

7 The ALJ did not rely on such a warrant here; indeed, the ALJ assumed that a warrant for 8 Fowlkes’s arrest was sufficient to establish the effective date of benefits suspension. It appears 9 that no warrant or order finding that Fowlkes has fled or was fleeing from justice exists. There is 10 some mention of a warrant issued on September 1, 1999 for “failure to appear,” A168, but this 11 warrant does not appear in the record, nor does it appear to have been presented to, or relied on 12 by, the ALJ. Moreover, it is unclear whether such a “failure to appear” warrant would qualify as 13 a sufficient judicial finding of flight under 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1) to warrant suspension of 14 benefits.⁴

15 In light of the foregoing, we find that the appropriate course is to remand this action to 16 the District Court with instructions to treat Fowlkes’s complaint as a petition for review of the 17 SSA Commissioner’s suspension of Fowlkes’s benefits and remand to the Commissioner to 18 examine whether Fowlkes’s benefits were suspended as of the date of a warrant or order issued 19 by a court or other authorized tribunal on the basis of a finding that Fowlkes fled or was fleeing 20 from justice, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. § 1382(e)(4)(A) and 20 C.F.R. § 416.1339(b)(1). See, e.g., 21 Curry v. Apfel, 209 F.3d 117, 124 (2d Cir. 2000) (“Upon a finding that an administrative record

⁴We note that it is possible that such warrants may be so routinely ordered as not to evidence the sort of finding of flight contemplated by the statute.

1 is incomplete or that an ALJ has applied an improper legal standard, we generally vacate and 2 instruct the district court to remand the matter to the Commissioner for further consideration.”); 3 Rosa v. Callahan, 168 F.3d 72, 82-83 (2d Cir. 1999) (“Where there are gaps in the 4 administrative record or the ALJ has applied an improper legal standard, we have, on numerous 5 occasions, remanded to the [Commissioner] for further development of the evidence” 6 (quoting Pratts v. Chater, 94 F.3d 34, 39 (2d Cir. 1996) (internal quotation marks omitted) 7 (alteration in original)).

8 CONCLUSION

9 For the foregoing reasons, we AFFIRM the District Court’s ruling on Fowlkes’s civil 10 rights claim and REMAND this action to the District Court with instructions to treat Fowlkes’s 11 complaint as a petition for review of the SSA Commissioner’s suspension of Fowlkes’s benefits 12 and to remand to the Commissioner for further proceedings consistent with this opinion.
